

National Modern Living

Water Studio designed, fabricated, and installed three new water features in the central courtyard at National Modern Living in Los Angeles, California. Each water feature consists of rectangular stainless steel fountain that seems to float above a succulent planter. Water shoots up from five nozzles and sheets down the polished stainless steel surfaces. A gentle sound of falling water can be heard as rivulets of water fall on to small beach pebbles covering the planter. The custom nozzles allow the concealed white LED light to illuminate the dancing water at night. The contemporary custom planters with powder coated stainless steel finish were also designed and fabricated by Water Studio.
