

Tamarack Junction

Two Water Veils that flank the entrance of The Tamarack Junction restaurant in Reno, Nevada, make a bold statement as they welcome and simultaneously beckon guests. Made from stainless steel, with a copper frame, and brick base, the water features were created to harmonize with the architecture and interior design of the space. From its location the dual water features serve as a lovely backdrop to the lounge, fusing with its natural inspired fireplace and color scheme.

Type

water veils at restaurant entrance

Materials

stainless steel, copper frame

Location

Reno, NV

Architect

MBA Architecture & Interior Design