

Earls Court

A sculptural copper water wall with bronze patina was recently designed and installed for a contemporary art collector in Los Angeles. The design of the water wall was developed from a simple sinusoidal wave that morphed into a disconstructed wave consisting of curved and flat surfaces with various textures. The forms and textures of the copper with underwater lighting create complimentary water textures and movement to engage the viewer.

Type

Sculptural copper water wall

Materials

copper with bronze patina,
black river rocks

Location

Los Angeles, CA