

Pacific Palisades Water Sculpture

A sculptural copper water wall with bronze patina stands opposite the front door in a luxury home in the hills of Pacific Palisades, CA. Based on a deconstructed wave, the sculpture works symbiotically with the existing landscape, creating an inviting and soothing ambiance to the entryway courtyard. The collection of curved and flat surfaces with variations in textures, are strategically constructed to compliment the movement of the falling water. Underwater lighting illuminates the patterns that glide along the surfaces of the sculpture, drawing attention to the feature even from inside the home.
